DEPUTIES PUT OFFICIAL O. K. ON A. TARDIEU

New Cabinet With Briand, Minister, Gets Word of Confidence.

By FREDERIC K. ABBOTT
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS, Nov. 9.—The new government of Premier Andre Tardieu may ask for a postponement of the five-power naval conference scheduled to begin in London on January 20, International News Service learned exclusively today from an authoritative, official source.

The new cabinet, it was revealed, fears that it will not have sufficient time to prepare sufficiently for a conference of such importance before the middle of January.

Premier Andre Tardieu, long called "France's coming man," today was hailed on all sides as the "miracle man."

Thrown into the breach to form a cabinet after two other leaders had failed, he accomplished a feat of political engineering which had been considered well-nigh-impossible.

Out of political chaos he brought order. Attacked by both the left and right wings when he announced his cabinet, he emerged from two confidence votes in the chamber of deputies this morning with majorities of 71 and 79 respectively.

Even his strongest supporters had expected victory by only a small margin. But M. Tardieu's government today was on a stable enough basis to insure the carrying out of all his policies, as the confidence votes attested.

BRIAND ALONG

Standing in the limelight with M. Tardieu, although not so far in the foreground, was M. Briand, foreign minister in the new cabinet and shaggy veteran of hundreds of political battles.

It was Briand who turned the tide in M. Tardieu's direction by brilliant oratory in the chamber, but it was M. Tardieu himself who made the result certain by a simple, straight-forward statement of irrevocable facts in which he explained to the deputies satisfaction just how he planned to pilot the ship of state.

Briand in answering his interpellators burst forth with a display of oratory which was remarkable even for him. For years he had held the chamber spellbound, but in his defense of M. Tardieu's government he outdid himself.

When he was finished, he received an outburst of applause seldom equalled. Even his bitterest opponents of the right applauded although not admitting agreement with his foreign policy.

M. Tardieu's dramatic appeal for the co-operation of the entire chamber was, therefore, unexpected. The chamber hardly expected to hear two such brilliant deliveries with a few hours.

It was Tardieu who won the extreme conservatives of the right to his standard. Where Briand generalized, he was specific and it was his definiteness that brought success.

MAKES STATEMENT

The statement which made the most impression dealt with the date for the evacuation of the Rhineland. Tardieu declared that on the 30, which was agreed upon by the young plan as the final date for complete withdrawal of French troops, was out of the question. This, he said, was because of the delay in ratifying and putting the plan into effect, since six months from the date of ratification as provided in the plan, would go beyond that date.

The first vote of confidence then followed shortly after four a.m. this morning as the debate. The result was 327 to 256. A few minutes later a second vote of confidence strengthened M. Tardieu's majority farther. The vote this time was 332 to 253.

SCHOOLS HEED STUDY WEEK

Special Programs To Be Put On In Each City School.

The week of Nov. 11-17 will be known as American Education Week. The American Legion, National Education Association and the U. S. Bureau of Education have taken the lead in making this an occasion of real significance.

The staff feels that former President Coolidge struck the keynote to the purpose of this week when he said, "The utmost endeavor must be exerted to provide for every child in the land the full measure of education which his need and his capacity demand, and none must be permitted to live in ignorance. Marked benefit has come in recent years from nationwide campaigns for strengthening public sentiment for universal education, for upholding the hands of constituted school authorities, and for promoting meritorious legislation in behalf of the schools. Such revivals are wholesome and should continue."

High School Observance

So expositions of the each days' theme are to be offered to the public daily through the pages of the Herald next week in this order.

G. O. P. LEADERS INVESTIGATE TARIFF BILL

Coalition Continues To Slash
Tariff On Farm Products
In Senate.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—While an embattled senatorial coalition continued to slash tariff rates on articles the farmer must buy, the "Big Three" Republican leaders of the house planned a council of war today in preparation for the predicted deadlock between the two branches over the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill.

The house leaders who came to Washington to canvass the situation were Speaker Longworth, Rep. Tilson, of Connecticut; majority floor leader, and representative Snell of New York, chairman of the rules committee.

Longworth and Tilson already had been informed by senate leaders that there is no possibility of the tariff bill being passed in the special session, and further that there is little likelihood of the senate adjourning two weeks before Thanksgiving until the regular session in December.

With the house twiddling its thumbs by holding two perfunctory sessions each week awaiting senate action on the tariff bill, there has been demand among members to force an adjournment until the regular session. Longworth and Tilson are understood to have told senate leaders they will not initiate a proposal for adjournment.

Sen Fess (R) of Ohio, a regular Republican leader, who conferred with Longworth and Tilson, declared the senate would go on with the tariff bill right up to the regular session.

"The house will send over two or three annual appropriation bills to the senate by the time it has concluded action on the attempt of Senator-elect Vane (R) of Pennsylvania, to claim his seat.

Since the senate will have to lay aside the tariff bill for urgent appropriation legislation, the regular Republican leaders informed Longworth and Tilson that final action on the tariff bill will come after Christmas, at all.

Although many of the senate "old guard" frankly want to adjourn the special session, they say they cannot place responsibility for abandoning tariff legislation on the Republican party. The Democrats and insurgent Republicans, in complete control of the tariff bill, have evinced a desire to go right on with their work.

With Senator Norris (R) of Nebraska leading the fight the senate continued to consider items in the metal schedule, which embraces many articles used by the farmer. In every instance thus far, Norris has successfully fought to wipe out the tariff boosts voted by the finance committee.

Senator Smoot (R) of Utah, chairman of the finance committee, hoped to complete the metal schedule today, which would bring the senate up to the bitter fight over the shingle and lumber tariff.

Among the reductions obtained from the finance committee's recommendations by the coalition on articles purchased by farmers are Cream separators, on which the committee sought a higher duty if the imported article was valued over $40; silver plated wares, pocket and pruning knives; metal buttons, needles, butts and hinges and screws.

TIRE DEALERS AT DEDICATION

Local Men Are Thrilled By Long Ride In Blimp, Defender.

A. H. Rogers and W. H. Nelson tire dealers returned Friday from a never-to-be-forgotten trip to Akron, where they attended the dedication services Thursday of the master ring for the ZRS-4, the world's largest Zeppelin. Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics of the navy, officially dedicated the ring. Rogers and Nelson were among the crowd of 50,000 who looked on.

The dirigible, to be completed in 18 months will be the largest in the world, the most formidable fighting ship and the first Zeppelin to be constructed in America. It will have a helium gas displacement of more than the combined capacity of the Graf Zeppelin and the Los Angeles, it will carry five airplanes and a battery of 16 machine guns and be capable of a useful load of 91 tons.

While in Akron the two Circleville visitors were fortunate enough to spend one hour and 40 minutes in the dirigible, "The Defender." They went up at noon in this 12 passenger ship, and had lunch 2000 feet in the clouds with the crew.

Fortune seemed to breeze right along with the embryo Zeppelinists for as they were enjoying the peak of their pleasure, their attention was attracted to their right, where heading into Akron was the "Los Angeles." "The Defender" nosed out to meet the incoming ship, and escorted it into town, floating above and below it.

When the Defender was up 2000 feet and the Los Angeles 1500 the passengers above were astounded to see a man get out on top of the Los Angeles as its nose pointed up and walked toward its tip. Then the mammoth ship dipped its nose toward the ground, and the human mosquito walked nimbly down the slanting top of the Zeppelin.

The dirigible journey was completed by escorting the Los Angeles out of town again, while airplanes in formation flew below Nelson and Rogers were the only passengers in addition to the crew, taking the trip on the dedication day. The Defender is a Goodyear ship and rides cannot be bought.

Survey Shows Ohio Farm Annual Income To Be $992 Since 1924

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—In the five years from 1924 to 1928 the average total net income of the Ohio farm family was $992 a year. The gross income per year for the family was $1,424, and the cash expenses $754, leaving a net cash income from sales, of $670. This was supplemented by food and fuel produced on the farm and consumed by the family, to the value of $322.

The figures have been collected and summarized by V. R. Wertz of the rural economics department of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station in a study of farm income trends in the state.

The totals show that the average gross net cash income for all farm families in the state was 162 million dollars during each of the past five years, and the Ohio farms have been producing, for consumption by the families of their operators, 78 million dollars' worth of goods a year.

In analyzing the sources of gross cash income Wertz found that averages for the past five years show 68 per cent of that income coming from the sale of animals and animal products, leaving 32 per cent derived from the sale of crops.

"These percentages should not be taken to show the relative importance of animals and crops in the state," says Wertz. "They show the relative importance in sales only, and not the value of production, for many crops are sold very largely in the form of meat animals and meat products after the crops have been fed to the animals."

The most important item of cash expenses has been taxes which in the past nine years have averaged 43 million dollars for the state or one-fourth of the total cash outlay for farm expenses. The tax bill of Ohio agriculture which amounted to 38 million dollars in 1920 had increased to 51 million in 1928. Next most important is the item of wages, which have taken 18 per cent of the cash outlay of Ohio farmers for business purposes in the past nine years; farm implements and machinery have taken 16 per cent, commercial feeds 11 per cent, feeder stock 4 per cent, twine 1 per cent, and miscellaneous items the remaining 10 per cent.

This Roll Call is to raise funds for the National Red Cross society and for the local, or Pickaway-co chapter. There are classes of membership ranging from $1 annual membership to a Patron membership of $100.

The treasury of the local chapter is completely depleted. To continue the work they have been doing for the past ten years they must have more money.

Therefore as Mayor of the city of Circleville I ask all the citizens of Circleville and Pickaway-co to answer the Roll Call and aid the local chapter financially and suggest that those who are financially able to subscribe to the memberships calling for larger amounts than $1.

SEN. MOSES' ACTION MAY CAUSE SPLIT

Statement To Meeting Looked On As Slam By Independents of Party.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—With the insurgent group suspicious of every political maneuver by the "old guard" regulars, the rather mysterious visit of Senator George H. Moses, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, to the middle west today left in its wake fears of a far-reaching schism within the Republican party.

The flippant reference by Moses to western insurgents as the "sons of the wild jackass" left the dependents angry and bitter toward their campaign chairman. Consequently, his invasion of their home territory for a series of "political conferences" heightened the tension within Republican ranks.

Several developments may follow Moses' trip to the political wigwags of the middle-west. In their importance, they are:

Several developments may follow Moses' trip to the political wigwags of the middle-west. In their importance, they are:

1.—Organization by the insurgents of a campaign committee of their own choosing, financed by popular subscription, with mutual aid for each other in next fall's senatorial campaign.

2.—A counter-attack by the insurgents on stand-pat regular Republicans who must likewise go to the polls in 1930.

DEMOCRATIC CHARGE

If the insurgents do organize their own campaign, a schism and a fight develop between the two factions of the Republican party, a breach would follow that would make the split of 1912 look like harmony. It undoubtedly would be carried into the 1932 election, seriously endangering a Republican success in the presidential campaign of that year and might lead to the permanent vacation of a third major party.

Such extraordinary developments would not be far fetched in view of the recent records of the leaders involved in the present controversy.

Only a year ago Senator Norris (R) of Nebraska, veteran insurgent leader, broke away from his party to support Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic presidential nominee. The rest of the insurgent group remained loyal to Herbert Hoover's candidacy, chiefly because he was promptly and warmly supported by Senator Brookhart (R) of Iowa and Senator Borah (R) of Idaho. Now both Brookhart and Borah have split with the President and have taken the lead among with Norris in opposing the administration.

LA FOLLETTE BOLTED

In the preceding presidential campaign, the elder Robert La Follette (R) of Wisconsin, bolted his party to head a thirty party movement. He carried with him, the now Senator La Follette, Senator Frazier (R) of North Dakota, and Brookhart. Frazier and Brookhart once were deemed all Republican recognition because of that bolt, only to be readmitted to party councils two years later.

Way back in 1912, Senator Hiram Johnson (R) of California, his late Theodore Roosevelt in the famous Bull Moose revolt. Johnson even ran upon the Roosevelt ticket as a candidate for the vice-presidency. Thus, many of the present day insurgents have had practical experience in bolting the Republican party.

The activities of Moses in the middle west will attract great interest, not only because of his political friendship for President Hoover and his official position as senatorial campaign manager, but because of his known antipathy for insurgents. The senator's "jackass" reference was but one of a long list of slighting comments on the little group of Republican independents in the senate. Then too, Moses was responsible for offering the post of senatorial campaign treasurer to Otto J. Kahn, the Wall Street financier, an appointment that outraged the insurgents.

MAY BE PEACE

There remains some possibility of peace in the Republican party, despite all the war talk. The insurgents have indicated a willingness to go right along with the party, whatever their political (Turn to Page 3, Please)

ASHVILLE TEAM OUTCLASSED BY COLUMBUS ST. MARY, 12-0

George Van Heyde's Gridders Carry Too Many Guns For Kauber-Coached Eleven—Zang, Avic Show To Advantage—McGloine Shows Good Form For Losers.

Coach George Van Heyde's Columbus St. Mary's high school gridders had too many guns for the Ashville team Friday at Ashville and when the smoke of a contest had blown away the Capitol City crew had won a game by a 12 to 0 score.

With its backfield hitting on all four and crashing the Ashville tackles for plenty of yardage, the issue of the contest was never in doubt.

The St. Mary's crew led by Zang, crack captain and signal-barker, showed a well directed attack and with deceptive double and triple passes finding their way into the box score often gained plenty of yardage on the Kauber-coached eleven.

STEADY MARCHES

All St. Mary's touchdowns came after marches down the field with all four of the backs carrying the pigskin. Zang would smack off-tackle for several yards, then Avic would crack through on a reverse play, or Grey would be given the ball on a double pass, or Ford, massive fullback, would crash through the line for several yards.

The first touchdown came in the first period after seven minutes of play. Ashville, with McGloine and Neff carrying the leather, made a first down after receiving.

Hudson punted to Zang who acted as safety man, and after it looked like he was going to be down with not much return, he reversed his field and carried the ball back 25 yards. On one play he got a first down, and on the next play he added another first down. Avic got two, Zang got four and Avic cracked Ashville's left tackle for the necessary yardage for a touchdown. Grey carried the ball over center for the extra point.

At the start of the second period, the Columbus Catholics added a second touchdown. Consistent ball totting by the St. Mary's Four Horsemen took the leather to the 18-yard mark. A pass, Zang to Callahan, put the ball on the three-yard line. Avic got a yard and Zang put the leather on the one-half yard line. Grey wiggled through guard for the touchdown. Zang hit a stone wall for the extra point and the score was 13 to 0.

Ashville received again. McGloine was thrown for a seven-yard loss by Callahan and Avic took Hudson's kick back to the Ashville 37-yard mark. Ford took a lateral pass for 16 yards. Zang carried the ball to the one-half yard line and Avic went over for the goal. Ford carried the ball through the line for the extra point. Score 20-0.

The final St. Mary's touchdown came after a steady march to the goal with Grey carrying the pigskin over. Ford crashed for the extra counter. The score was 27 to 0.

ASHVILLE RALLIES

Ashville showed to good advantage in the final minutes of play when they scored four first downs, one of which came on a penalty against Columbus for slugging.

McGloine got loose several times for short gains, but was the only Ashville player who showed any real form. Neff, diminutive half-back, left the game in the third period when he suffered an injury.

Ashville's team plays at Circleville next Friday in its last game of the year.

"Special Delivery" Alton K. Marsters of Dartmouth

Football is not the only forte of Al Marsters of Dartmouth, who is, despite the Yale victory on Saturday last, still considered one of the outstanding gridiron stars. Al got his first real contact with pigskin at Exeter. Dartmouth concluded the good work, where his teammates have given him the name of "Special Delivery." At the extreme left, Al Marsters is shown as he emerges from the classroom where he spends much time in study at his fraternity house, the Delta Kappa Epsilon. (Upper)—There are few who can beat him in a scientific game of bridge. He is shown playing a game with some classmates at the frat house. The lower picture depicts the hero of the gridiron in a serious mood, which gives much joy to his teachers. He plays golf and drives his car when his presence is not needed on the gridiron.

BATTLES of skill and science, clashes between flashing personalities, games that set the blood tingling, dynamic moments of play that will yield golden dividends in breath-taking memories for years to come—such is the football of 1929. Teams, individuals, coaches all making football history, and men like Albion Booth and Alton K. Marsters making records for future teams to shoot at.

Al Marsters is just about the best answer to those carping old critics that cry and sigh over the present generation, for this giant of the grid is just as keen on his studies as he is about football, as even the professors at Dartmouth will testify. This flashing mass of courage and grit is the football sensation of a season, replete with sensations and the hero of the hour on the Dartmouth campus. And when Al Marsters' class mates are grown grizzled and gray, they will still speak with awe of the man who packed the thrills of a lifetime into five magic moments of football. The man who threw the decisive passes in four plays, right after a Yale fumble gave the ball to Dartmouth on Yale's 35-yard line.

Marsters, who is a second-year man at Dartmouth, is twenty-one years of age and can propel his 182 pounds of muscle, brawn and grit with more grace and agility than any ballet dancer. And this same Marsters is guaranteed to take the heart out of any team, however heady with the wine of victory. Is it any wonder then that he has made football history? And is it any wonder that men like Marsters take the sting right out of little items like the Carnegie Foundation football report? Al Marsters excels at almost every sport. He is a star golfer, and does not disdain a set-to with the ping-pong bat—in fact, it's his winter sport. His bridge is a joy to his partner and a nightmare to his opponent. Science, strength and subtlety—these are just some of the attributes of a "stirring, smashing player." And he is just one answer to the Carnegie Foundation report.

given the new government, there were many deputies who doubted that Tardieu would succeed where Briand had failed with the same problems facing them both.

POINCARÉ'S STUDENT

But even these realize that former Raymond Poincaré long ago had started schooling M. Tardieu to succeed himself and that M. Poincaré is consulted by the new premier on all important questions of state.

"That's why they gave confidence to M. Tardieu," said one deputy this morning. "And as long as the chamber knows that Tardieu is endeavoring to carry out the policies laid down by the 'one man in all France has confidence, they will continue to give him their confidence."

views, in accord with the regular organization, and remain Republicans even when the two groups disagree. Actual warfare can come only if the regular Republicans make some overt act hostile to the political welfare of the insurgents. If such an act occurs, there will be open and lasting warfare.

The warfare will be nationwide too, since—aside from the whole house of representatives—34 senators must face the electorate. Of this number, there are 21 Republicans and 13 Democrats now in the senate. Only four out-and-out insurgents are in the number, Borah, of Idaho; McAdams, of N. D.; Norris, of Nebr., and Pine, of Okla. Four others—Capper, of Kansas; Couzens, of Michigan; McNary, of Oregon, and Schall of Minnesota,—frequently vote with the insurgents and are classed as independents. The other Republicans, 13 in number, are "regulars" and include Deneen, Ill., the pending successor to Edge, N. J.; Gillette, Mass.; Goff, W. Va.; Gould, Maine; Keyes, N. H.; Hastings, Del.; Metcalf, R. L.; Phipps, Colo.; Sackett, Ky.; Warren, Wyo.; Allen, Kans. and the new McCulloch, Ohio.

The Democratic senators facing re-election next year, are Blease, S. C.; Bratton, N. Mex.; Glass, Va.; Harris, Ga.; Harrison, Miss.; Heflin, Ala.; Ransdell, La.; Robinson, Ark.; Sheppard, Tex.; Simmons, N. C.; Steck, Iowa; Brook, Tenn., and Walsh, Montana. Only 1 each will be in danger in the general election.

Warfare, therefore, might prove far more costly to the regular Republican organization than to the insurgents. This alone may prevent open hostilities.

This is No. 4 of a series showing the many phases of advertising production. In ad No. 3 we dealt with the necessity of a suitable illustration. Watch for No. 5.

"now then the ENGRAVING"

The finished drawing of our "Roscanne" dress now goes to the engravers—here it is photographed and an exact reproduction of the original drawing, reduced to the required size is made in zinc. This etching will later be used in setting up our ad. Next we must prepare the story of "Roscanne" Dresses.

THE MOTORCAR BAROMETER

The French chamber of commerce has sent out a report on the automobile industry, in which it seems to be gratified by the prospect that 25,000 more automobiles will be made in France this year than last. It estimates the total production at 250,000. Great Britain turned out 208,000 cars last year and Germany 90,000.

When these figures are put beside the American record of motorcar production for 1928, namely 4,358,000 cars, the supremacy of this country becomes clearly apparent. They say that steel production is a barometer of trade. Motorcar ownership likewise is an index of the wealth of the people. American carpenters, bricklayers, plasterers and painters go to their work in their own cars.

IF ADVERTISING STOPPED

What would be the reaction upon the cost of living if advertising ceased and its beneficent force were stopped? This question provides much food for rumination.

It is an interesting conjecture. Advertising largely takes the place of personal selling effort, which is very much more expensive.

A California editor cogitating on the possibility of a cessation of advertising says:

"It would mean that our railroad trains would be thronged with salesmen whose homeward bound mail would carry fewer orders, all of smaller volume than now."

"Distribution upon the present scale would be impossible. Manufacturing would fall off, with a consequent decrease in labor demand. Jobbers would find their business proportionally limited. Retailers would make fewer and slower turnovers. Prices of all commodities would take a rise that would make war prices and ante-war prices seem low by comparison."

THE DEAD GOOSE

Anthracite coal operators and miners are in a state of alarm. The demand for hard coal is far below that of a few years ago and is still diminishing. Shipments to New England states are 20 per cent less than three years ago, and there has been a decided loss in tonnage shipped to the West. Even in the heart of the anthracite country this fuel is suffering from competition with others.

The responsibility rests largely with the operators and miners themselves. In past years when they undertook at frequent intervals to settle disputes over wages and working conditions by strike or lockout, they set about it knowing that whatever the outcome the consumers would pay the cost of the interruption. Having no substitute fuel to turn to the anthracite-consuming public looked upon the closing of the mines for any considerable time as a national calamity.

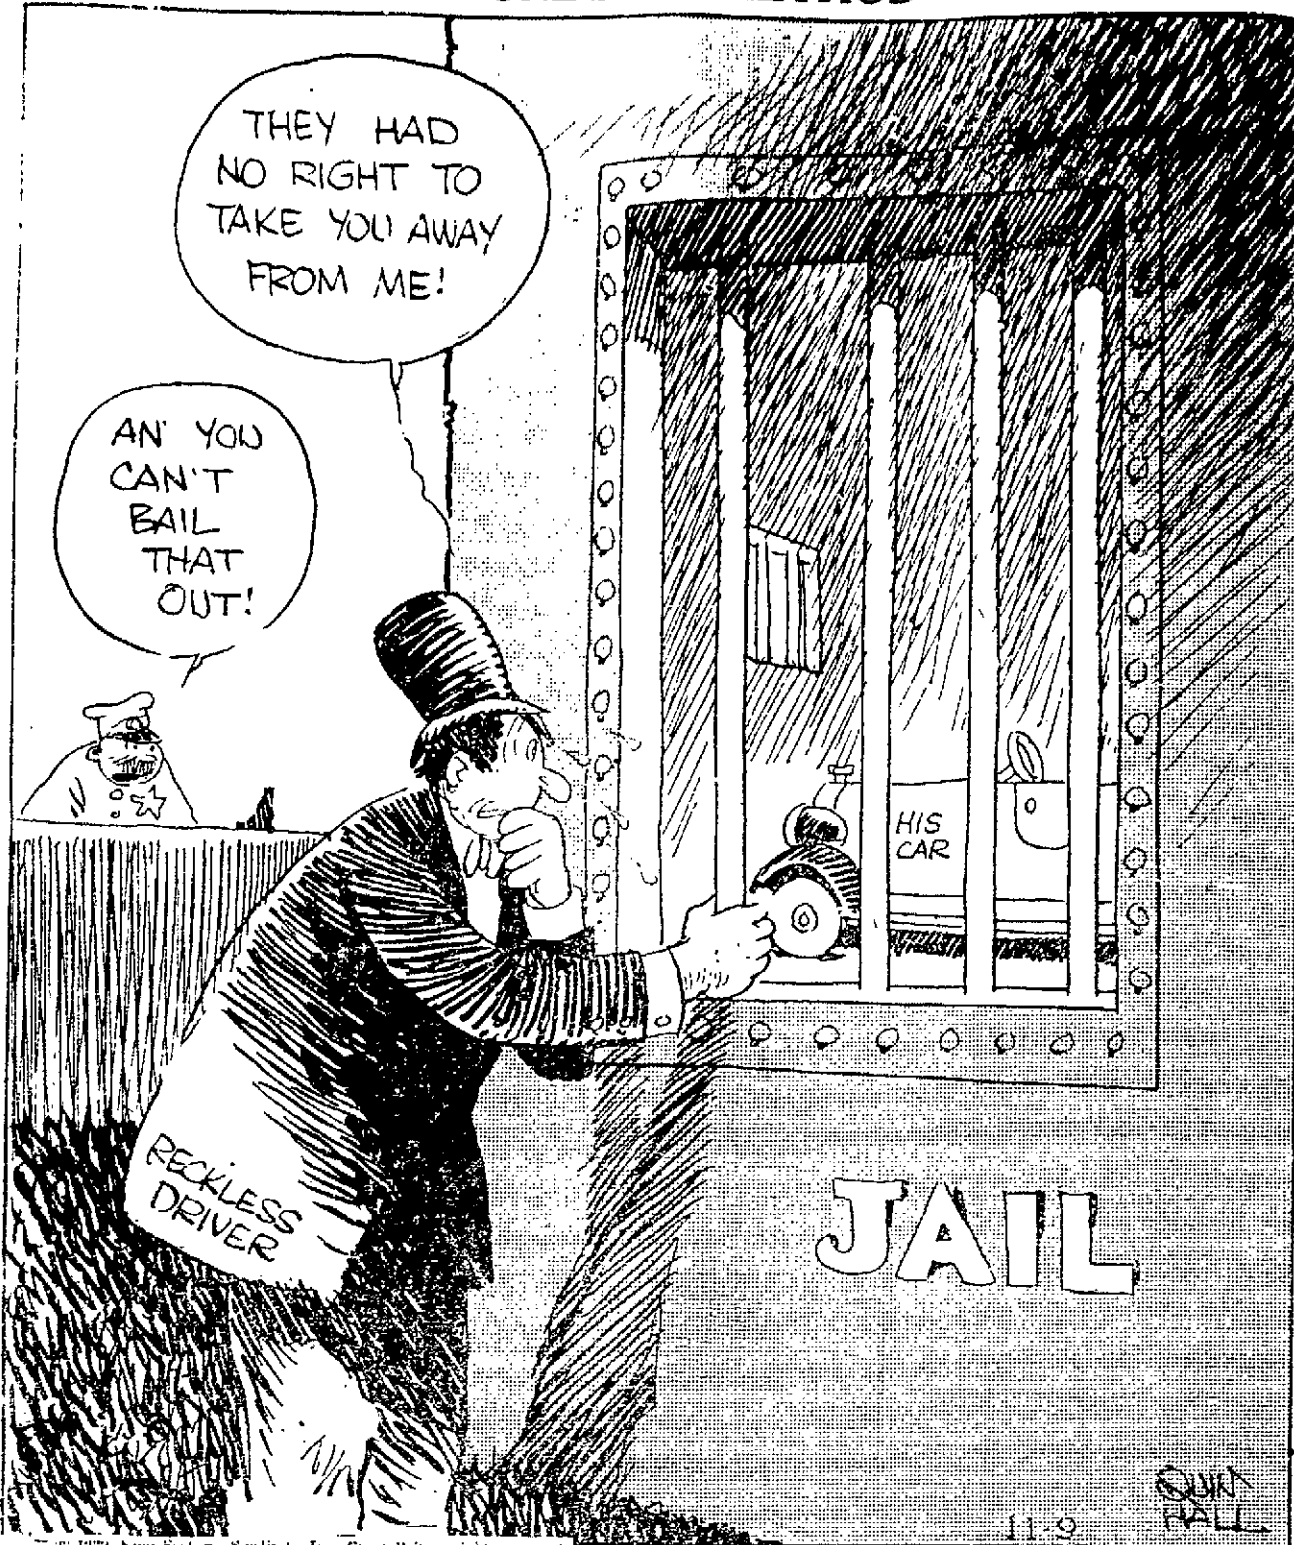

But there is a last straw in all things, and the last anthracite strike seems to have been it. It is remembered that after the first fever of apprehension the public decided to try other fuels. Many found substitutes that met their needs and have never returned to hard coal. The warning of far-sighted producers that business was being lost that would never be regained came too late.

Coal barons and their employees have discovered that it is easier to lose a market than to recapture it. They rode the willing horse to death. There is an object lesson for every industry that is tempted to become arrogant. Let producers of oil, gas, electricity and bituminous coal take heed.

"I can offer you three anesthetics," said the dentist to the nervous patient. "Gas, novocaine or the 1908 comic magazines."

We have been in hopes that Mr. Edison of his successor would do something along the line of non-breakable toaster cord.

ONE SAFE METHOD

"The Masked Hostess"

by BLAIR STEVENSON

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

John Sloan, young New York attorney, is called into the office of the firm's senior partner and informed that he is to handle the affairs of "Happy Jack" Van Slaick, wealthy sportsman, who has died suddenly, leaving only an abandoned Long Island estate, The Firs, and memories of a wiped-out fortune to his beautiful young daughter, Nathalie. As the lawyers discuss this crisis, Miss Van Slaick arrives from Europe.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.)

CHAPTER II.
JOHN SLOAN was not at all susceptible to the charms of young womanhood. But the sheer beauty of Nathalie Van Slaick fairly smote him as she was shown into the room and Horne went forward to meet her.

Nothing that Horne had said had prepared Sloan for the almost clamorous loveliness of her. She was dressed with simplicity but distinction, her plain black hat accentuating the gold of her hair, which in its turn was in vivid contrast to her dark eyes and long dark lashes and the hint of olive in a skin without a flaw. Her progress across the floor to the chair which Horne held out seemed to Sloan the very perfection of coordinated grace and motion. And she had been only a few minutes in the room when he told himself that she had qualities of heart and character of which her beauty was no more than a reflection and expression, and that he would give her interests, which had been entrusted to his care, the last ounce that was in him of professional skill and personal devotion.

Courage was the quality in her which stood out at once and roused his admiration. She showed it as soon as Horne, while he skillfully created the opportunity he desired, came indirectly to the matter of her dissipated fortunes and embarrassed property.

"I am sure," he told her, "it must give you great happiness to resemble your father as much as you do. I am sure, too, it must console you to know how widely he was admired. Some day you must read what the New York newspapers said. 'The greatest sportsman of his generation.' 'An immeasurable loss to polo and race riding.' 'A man whose skill and courage were of the blend which spells genius in the field,' and so forth and so on."

"I shall read them all—and read them over and over—and then read them," she said.

As she spoke, Sloan thought that her voice and accent were the only things about her that were a little disappointing. Both were cultivated but seemed not individual to her, but rather a conventionalized manner of speech echoing the Spence School and the Junior League and the things that they imbed. Scores of girls he knew talked as exactly like her as though they were a race in themselves.

"I have spoken to you of your father somewhat at length," Horne went on, "because he was so much a symbol of the two reasons why you are much to be envied. One of them is that you are the daughter of a great sportsman; the other that you are a member of an old and widely established family. The first, I know, will enable you to hear some news I have for you which might dismay to some extent a girl not bred in your splendid traditions. The second will diminish the importance of the news since with the wealth and power stance of your family a girl like you is always secure in the world."

Nathalie smiled and her voice was perfectly steady.

"I can always hear bad news," Mr. Horne, I had to bear it when father was killed. News can never be too bad again since that."

"That's the spirit, Miss Van Slaick. Spoken in the true tradition. Do you want me to be direct with you?"

Nathalie nodded. Horne came straight to the point.

"Unfortunately, I cannot tell you how sorry am your father of recent years fell into a way of realizing on the properties he had inherited and spending the ready cash. He—"

"You mean that there is nothing left? If that is so, please tell me." Her voice was still as steady as before, but in his heart Sloan knew that she was filled with fright and panic.

"Not quite as bad as that," Horne put what reassurance he could into the smile he gave her. "There is your Long Island estate and some money in the bank. Unhappily, however, The Firs is encumbered with a rather unwieldy mortgage—fifty thousand dollars is the amount of it—and the bank which holds it has begun suit to foreclose its lien. The action was forced a month ago, after the bank had obtained a court order permitting it to serve summons and complaint by publication, you being not then resident in this country."

"But surely, Mr. Horne," Nathalie interrupted. "The Firs must be worth more than that. There are more than two hundred acres of it and the house has forty rooms—" to withdraw it at once the bank will honor your check. Here is a pocket checkbook. And now what will your address be if we should need to get in touch with you?"

Nathalie was fully mistress of herself now. In the fervor and speech, with its touch of attraction, typical of girls of her class, she said that she had a room at the Waldorf and sent her baggage there, but would leave by the Cannon Ball Express for Southampton later in the afternoon.

"They know me very well at the Waldorf for father and I always stopped there whenever we were in New York and I am very fond of the old place. I telephoned there from the pier this morning and they promised to make me comfortable." She gave her hand to Mr. Horne. "My money in the bank will be convenient to pay my bill with and I can keep my other cash intact. Good-bye."

Horne assured her again that her courage was sure to win and Sloan escorted her out of the office to the elevator in the hall. They stood in silence till a car should stop at their floor. And again while they waited Sloan caught for the second time the flicker of fright in her eyes which told him terror was her companion. So he spoke out plainly:

"Miss Van Slaick, if when you reach your hotel you find that you need money or any other assistance, please telephone me. It is your right as a client of our firm. Be sure and call me personally, since I am in charge of your case."

"Thank you—thank you ever so much," Mr. Sloan. But of course I'll have no trouble. A number of my relatives are rather rich, you know—the one I'm going to this afternoon is frightfully rich."

The elevator car received her, and he bowed and she was gone. But just before the car dropped from sight he saw the smile she had accorded him vanish from her face and dismay assume the place of it. And as plainly as though she had told him so, he divined that the $28 in her bank was her whole available money, and that if her relatives did not protect her she would have nowhere to turn.

At the Waldorf Nathalie was received with every courtesy and kindness, one of the assistant managers accompanying her to the room she had engaged to see that it lacked nothing she might require.

"We are charmed to have you with us," he said, "for the Van Slaicks are a Waldorf family. This is almost the only hotel in New York having traditions. One of them is that no Van Slaick ever stops anywhere else. Your father was greatly admired here and all employees remember him with affection. He was of the days when the hotel was the rallying place for all that was brilliant and famous in New York life. With you, please, Miss Van Slaick, call on us when you are here for anything of any sort the hotel may be able to do for you. Is there anything you can think of at the moment?"

"Nothing," replied Nathalie, "except that I would like to know when the next express leaves for Southampton. I am going to my aunt's home this afternoon."

DR. COPELAND SAYS— A VOID COMPLICATIONS OF NASAL INFECTIONS

Neglecting Simple Head Cold, Dr. Copeland Points Out, May Bring About a Violent Inflammation of the Inner Ear—and Nerve-Racking Pain.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ONE ailment, common at that, is practically disregarded by most persons. I refer to the cold, prevalent at every time of year. Nobody thinks of going to bed to nurse a cold and, unless it is very bad indeed, almost nothing is done to relieve it.

Of course, a cold is like influenza, in one sense. It is not serious if uncomplicated. Nobody ever died of influenza; nobody ever dies from the immediate effects of a cold. It is the secondary pneumonia that is responsible for the serious and even fatal effects of influenza. The complications are what make a neglected cold dangerous.

The familiar type of cold begins in the nose. First there is a sense of dryness and then the nose begins to "run." Then it creeps around to other tissues than those lining the nasal passages.

In order to appreciate what the cold may do or where it may go, we must consider the nose in its relationship to other structures. What passageways exist, down which the disease may march to cause further trouble?

The direction usually taken is downward into the throat, perhaps into the bronchial tubes and lungs. Perhaps the severity of the ailment may decrease within a few days, so that it sort of "tapers off" and disappears. Unfortunately, the symptoms may grow worse, because the first infection has been added the disturbance produced by a second variety of germs.

But there is another passageway besides the large and open one to the lining of the nose known as the Eustachian tube. This is a canal running from a point where the nose and throat join, upward and backward, somewhat more than an inch in distance, to the interior of the ear to what is called the "middle ear."

There is such a passageway on each side. The Eustachian tube is the drainage canal and ventilation pipe of the middle ear. It provides a means of escape for the secretions of the ear and also permits the passage of air.

If the tube is swollen and closed it gives the "stuffed up" feeling you have in a cold. This condition may cause slight deafness, similar to that caused by getting the ears full of water while in swimming.

A cold in the nose may find its way into the Eustachian tube. The lining of the nasal passages and of the ear passage are the same. Mucous membrane passes from one part into the other. Disease may take this route and produce swelling of the passageway.

If the tissues are so swollen that air cannot get through, you can understand why the secretions from the lining of the ear, secretions increased by the inflammation, will be peeped up within that cavity.

What happens then?
Barreling, bursting, throbbing, cutting pain! That is the way the trouble starts. A neglected cold in the nose, becomes a violent inflammation in the ear.

THEATRES

AT THE MET

One of the greatest character actors of the screen, Wallace Beery, has his greatest role in the swift-moving action, mystery drama, "Chinatown Nights," which opens at the Met Theatre Sunday. It is a role demanding an infinite amount of power and resource and Beery brings to it all the force and skill which has led him step by step up the ladder to screen success.

"Chinatown Nights" deals with the love of a scintillating woman of society for a coarse, brutal, cynical white man who rules a million Chinese through the national tong organization. This love drags the woman down to the gutter of Chinatown's underworld until, finally her pitiable condition arouses a responsive chord in the white boss of Chinatown. Together they seek regeneration.

In this setting of intrigue, mystery and absorbing suspense, Florence Vidor performs one of her most dramatic parts.

An excellent group of screen artists, including Warner Oland and Jack Oakie, are in the cast, and William A. Wellman, the man who made "Wings," directed the picture.

AT THE CLIFTONA

The trials and tribulations of a traveling "Uncle Tom's Cabin" troupe are very amusingly portrayed in "The Girl in the Show," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer talking picture which is at the Cliftona Theatre Saturday. Pessie Love is a delightful "Little Eva" while Raymond Hackett, whose popularity has quadrupled since "The Trial of Mary Dugan," whose "Madame X" is impressive as a lover, and very funny as "Simon Legree," led "Prouty" of "The Broadway Melody" and the imitable Ford Sterling are at their best in two excellent comedy characterizations. The piece is an adaptation of the Kenyon Nicholson-John Golden play, "The Fifth," which scored a hit on New York's Broadway last season. Its stage producer, Edgar Selwyn, also directed it for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

OBITUARY

Virginia Shoemaker Wilson was born in Ross-co. Ohio, near Kings- ton, on June 16th, 1852. She at- tended school in her home com- munity.

While in her teens she was in- structed in the Heidelberg cate- chism and confirmed as a member of the German Reformed church. On Oct. 15, 1874, she was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas M. Wilson, a veteran of the Civil war, who preceded her in death 20 years ago. Of this union were born three children; Miss Alice M. Wilson, who survives to lay to rest her mother. Ella B. Wilson, who died in infancy and Roy L. Wil- son, who died in Circleville in July 1928, whose death the mother took much to heart.

Surviving Roy are his widow and two children; Ariel Alice and Mar- vin Roy, of Ravenna, O. Mrs. Wilson also leaves two brothers and one sister. Mrs. Wilson was a devoted mother, attached to her home and family and of a friendly, neighborly disposition.

Broken in health for a number of years her end came peacefully as a child falling asleep.

"Upon the sadness of the sea. The sunset broods reflectfully; From the far lonely spaces, slow Withdrawn the wistful afterglow."

"So out of life the splendor dies, So darken all the happy skies; So gathers twilight cold and stern, But overhead the planets burn."

"And up the east another day Shall chase the bitter dark away. What tho' your eyes with tears be wet; The sunrise never failed us yet."

"The blush of dawn may yet re- store Our light and hope and joy once more."

Sad soul, take comfort, nor forget That sunrise never failed us yet."

OUR MUSEUM
By Alice Griner
We, the Sixth Grade at High-st, school have started a museum. Each one in our class chose a state to write to. We looked in an atlas to find a small town whose population was less than 1,000.

In a few weeks we began receiving letters from some of the states. We first received a box from Ocean Spring, Mississippi. It contained some oyster and clam shells, silver moss, holly, Giant pine-cones, pecans, sugar cane and a Japanese and Chinese persimmon. We next received a box from Delhi, New York. It contained some kodak films, powered milk, typewriter ribbon, a little shoe, some maple sugar, and a piece of salt rock. From Texas came the story of cotton. It included cotton seeds, cotton bloom, cotton in the green-boil, an opened boll, a sack in which it is packed, and a cotton bale. We also got a box from Halifax, Virginia. In it we found a tobacco leaf, sorbom, cedar, and many different kinds of leaves. Next we got a box from Brownstone, Indiana. In it were limestone, clay, arrow heads and axeheads.
In our packages to them we sent buckeyes, a pumpkin, apples, corn, wheat, flour, some walnuts, some of Wittich's stick candy, and a picture of Circleville built in a circle.

This idea is very beneficial to us because it helps us in Geography, English, writing and spelling. It also helps us to know what other schools are doing.

EIGHTH TEST RESULTS
Results of the first Muller and Long accomplishment test in grammatical usage of the eighth grade were high 100, median 80, and low 60. Miss Yates, English instructor did not disclose the pupils that attained above 90.

HOMEMAKERS MEET

The following program was presented. Piano solos, Mabel Dresbach; Hallowe'en story, Margaret Long; violin solos, Katherine Brown; vocal, Pauline Hall, and piano solos, Betty Pickens.
A unique lunch was served consisting of sizer, doughnuts, peanut butter and minced ham sandwiches, and Eskimo pies.
The remainder of the evening was spent in playing games. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Fetherlin.

GIRL RESERVES INITIATE

Glick, Myriam Hitchcock, Zelma Hoffman, Ethel Hussey, Lucile Kirkwood, Virginia Nelson, Dorothy Reigel, Marie Richey, Mary Roth, Doris Shonkwiler, Hilda Thomas and Helen Yates became Girl Reserves, Thursday night (seriously and roughly speaking). There are now 30 members.
The impressive candle service was used for the solemn initiation and then the fun began. After part of the light initiation they were allowed to eat. The two long tables were decorated by blue and white candles which furnished all the light. The initiates were made to eat sandwiches, olives, pickles, ice cream, and cake with a knife held in their left hand only. The rest of the fun followed. They then washed the dishes and were informed what costumes they must wear on Friday.
Mary Margaret Moore, a pledge was unable to attend.

The old members, Florence Cellar, Helen Cellar, Margie Hunsicker, Martha Kinney, Ellen Leist, Doris Peters, Wilmina Phebus, Virginia Richey, Mildred Ritt, Evelyn Steele, Grace Steele and Elizabeth Roundhouse held their regular meeting Thursday noon. Plans were discussed for the booth to be in charge of the Reserves for the Ashville football game.

Several members of the orchestra are trying out for the All-State Orchestra.
RESERVES DRESS UP
Many Freshmen were vexed at the appearance of numerous upper classmen Friday. Girls came gowned with their dresses on backwards, wearing differently colored stockings and shoes and garbed in kimono for overcoats.
One curd Frosh approached a teacher and said "What are they tryin' to do make fun of our Hallowe'en Party tonight?" "No," said the teacher politely. "It's just the Girl Reserve initiation."

SPECIAL EDUCATION
The girls in special education under the supervision of Marie Hamilton are making curtain tie-backs out of colored oil-cloth in domestic science. The boys in manual training are practicing with plumb lines.
In the lower special education under the supervision of Mrs. Bessie Lee, won the contest of cleatons. The prize will be awarded Monday.

The boys and girls are starting reed flower baskets.
A Hallowe'en party was held last week. The group was divided into parts, for contests. The side by Edgar Bard received the most points. Each pupil was given a Hallowe'en basket of candy corn.

NEW TABLE IN OFFICE
With the coming of a new long oak table to the office force in the principal's office, a few improvements were noted. This table allows plenty of study room for the office girls and may serve as an operating room for (Dr.) J. M. Guthrie if necessary. In fact the table is very useful. The new table was constructed in the manual training department by Donald Wolfe, John Himrod, Henry Bartholomew, and Frederick Colville. It is 10 feet in length and three feet in width. All filing cabinets which were previously in the southern portion of the office now are in the northern part or next to the study hall.

E. L. Gephart's desk has also been moved to the front of the office next to the teacher's mail box. A new regulation given by the principal and office girls to teachers and students reads as follows:
No person or persons shall enter behind the large oak table, or be or she will be subject to a fine or punishment. Enacted by the principal and office force this 5th day of November, 1929. Signed—E. L. Gephart, principal; Doris Shonkwiler, Elizabeth Roundhouse, office girls.

AULD'S SCORES DOUBLE HIT
Auld's Inc. of Columbus, O., made a clean sweep of the invitation and class jewelry business here this term. The choice was made similarly in each case: the manufacturer's label being hidden from each sample produced, and the class men choosing without assistance from faculty, salesmen, or outsiders.

Junior Jewelry
The design represented by Auld's Inc. of Columbus, O., was unanimously voted the pattern for the Junior class pins and rings at a meeting held Wednesday. Mr. Sensenbrenner is the local representative. The workmanship on the pins is guaranteed the lifetime of the wearer.
The ring and pin committee composed of Grace Steele, chairman, Mary Roth, Ned Dresbach, Virginia Nelson and Gerald Horn, on Oct. 25 chose the design they thought to be the best from each of the three representatives.
Principal Gephart arranged the boxes so that no one knew whose design he was displaying. The samples, in charge of Grace Steele, were on display Tuesday and Wednesday.
Juniors are urged to give their orders to Ed. Sensenbrenner as soon as possible. They may choose from rings, pins, lavallieres for girls, and watch charms for boys, all of which have a uniform pattern. Cash must accompany orders.

Senior Invitations
Seniors had a meeting, Monday evening for the purpose of selecting invitations. Those which they selected have a ship in the lower left hand corner, bearing the class ring monogram on the sail. The cost per dozen is $1.44.
These invitations will be secured from Sensenbrenner's jewelry store, having been ordered from Auld's Incorporated Co.

TIGERS GET WORKOUT
Circleville Merchants 30, Tigers 6, was the final score of the battle Tuesday evening on the high school gridiron in which Dean White and Pinky Wilson were responsible for the Tiger gains, while Goldsberry and Howard White were best for the visitors.
Dordy Courtright proved fatal to all the Tiger advances through the left tackle. Gerald Hanley was in on every play, and in several cases made the tackle before the quarterback could pass the ball. Hundley and Hoffman did the best tackling for the Tigers, while Courtright proved to be the best tackler of the Merchants.
Rector was in and seemed to have his old pep despite his lay-off, due to injuries received in the Washington game.

The hours were from two until five o'clock. During that time, violin and piano music by Mrs. Fred Cook and Mrs. Dard Hunter of Chillicothe entertained.

Decorations in the Dunlap Colonial residence, for the occasion were baskets of chrysanthemums of different size and shades from white to deep pink. In the dining room, the center piece on the table was a shallow green crockery bowl, filled with amber chrysanthemums. Large clusters of yellow and white chrysanthemums on the buffet were guarded by tall yellow burning tapers.

In the receiving line with Mrs. Dunlap and Mrs. David Dunlap Jr. were Mrs. Howard Yerges of Columbus, and Miss Florence Bitzer of Chillicothe.

Assisting the hostess in entertaining were Mrs. John Smith, Mrs. William T. Ulm, Miss Estella Grimes, Mrs. Edwin Bitzer, Mrs. William Heiskell, Mrs. Jennie Tipton and Miss Flora Dunlap. O. E. S. ELECTION IN NEW HOLLAND
At the regular meeting of Pudity Chapter No. 65, Order of the Eastern Star, New Holland, Tuesday evening, the annual election of officers as held. A large attendance was recorded and much interest was shown in the selection of next year's Chapter Officials.

There was an additional officer to be chosen this year, because of a rather rigid change in the ritual of the order. The new post is that of Associate Patron.
Following is the complete list of elective officers:
Worthy Matron, Miss Mennie Jennings; Worthy Patron, Ernell J. Wright; Associate Matron, Miss Leah Binns; Associate Patron, Charles Shasteen; Secretary, Mrs. Jane May; Treasurer, Mrs. Ida Gooley; Conductress, Mrs. Muriel Yeoman; Associate Conductress, Mrs. Hazel Radcliffe; Trustee, Mrs. Etta Wright.
Mrs. Bessie Welch, who has been secretary of the lodge for 24 years declined to again accept this station. She finds it impossible to give the work the attention she gave it in past years and expressed her desire to turn the station over to some younger member. In her long term of office she has done excellent work and her long experience has fitted her as an authority upon the duties and customs of each and every office of the Chapter. The members feel that they have lost one of their most efficient officers.
A date for the annual installation of officers was not definitely decided upon, although Dec. 17 was mentioned as a suitable time.
